

Noteworthy Trends

GADOE Assessment Division has provided a synopsis of Noteworthy Trends from the Spring 2015 administration of the GA Milestone. These trends represent how students responded to constructed response items and common mistakes that can be avoided. Teachers should use these to inform priorities for learning and selection of instructional strategies.

ELA Constructed Response:

- Students responding to items that require comparing the viewpoints/main ideas of two authors/passages may only focus on explaining the viewpoint/main idea of one of the authors/passages.
- Students may provide a basic answer to the prompt without providing supporting details from the passage(s).
- Students may provide details from the passage(s) without addressing the question in the prompt.

Narrative Writing:

- Students may restate or summarize the existing text in narrative form rather than provide an original narrative response.
- For prompts that ask the student to provide a narrative from a specific point of view, students may provide a narrative from a different point of view.
- For prompts that ask the student to rewrite the story with a different ending or a different point of view, students may copy large portions of the given text with minimal changes.
- Student responses may have only limited narrative elements or may use narrative elements such as dialogue in ways that do not effectively advance the narrative.

Argumentative / Opinion Writing:

- Students may provide an essay that introduces a claim, but provide little development with few details drawn from the passages.
- Students may copy or closely paraphrase large portions of the prompt or passages (with or without attribution) while providing little original work (also seen in Informative/Explanatory Writing).
- Students may present both sides of the argument without choosing a side (or simply writing an Informative essay) or may choose both sides.

Noteworthy Trends

- Students may choose support from only one of the two passages (i.e., whichever passage best supports their claim or opinion).
- For grades 7 and 8 and High School: Students may present only one side of the argument, omitting a counterclaim.

Informative / Explanatory Writing:

- Students may provide an informative essay with some details drawn from the passage but with little organizational structure.
- Students may provide little development with few details drawn from the passages or with support drawn from only one passage.
- Students may copy or closely paraphrase large portions of the prompt or passages (with or without attribution) while providing little original work (also seen in Argumentative/Opinion Writing).

Math Constructed Response:

- For multistep processes, students were sometimes able to start the process correctly but were unsure how to complete the process.
- Students would sometimes arrive at the correct answer using an unexpected process. Many prompts allowed for the students to take multiple correct approaches for full credit.
- Students would sometimes not provide a complete explanation or a complete process for how they arrived at the answer.
